Store Hours

In January and February, the store will be closing at 7pm on weekdays, rather than our usual 8pm.

Parking

Metered parking (25 cents for 20 minutes) is available in front of the store. Meters are enforced 8am-6pm Monday through Saturday (except for federal holidays). Note the number on the pole you park by, and pay at the box located between the dental office driveway and Popeyes driveway. The box accepts quarters, dollar coins, and credit cards, and prints a receipt that shows the expiration time. Meter parking for vehicles with Disability License Plates or a Disability Certificate is free. (Rates and hours shown are subject to change without notice - the meters are run by the city, not by us.)

Free parking is also available in the dental office lot from 5pm-8pm Monday through Thursday, and all day Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

Sales

The 34th Anniversary Sale runs Friday, November 28, through Sunday, December 7, giving you two weekends to take advantage of the sale. December 1 marks Uncle Edgar's 34th anniversary. Come into Uncle Edgar's or Uncle Hugo's and save 10% off everything except discount cards, gift certificates, or merchandise that is already marked 40% off. A discount card will save you even more - you'll get both 10% savings from the discount card and 10% off from the sale. (Sale prices apply to in-store purchases, but not to mail, phone, or website orders.)

Our annual Inventory Reduction Sale will be December 26-31, and will feature deep discounts on things we really, really want to get rid of. It will not be a storewide sale like the Anniversary Sale.

Holiday Gift Ideas

Our most popular gift option continues to be our gift certificate. We can issue one for any amount. It can be used at either or both Uncles. It can even be used for mail orders, and it can be purchased over the phone (if you have a Visa, Mastercard, or Discover Card) and we can mail it either to the purchaser or to the recipient, or we can just enter the balance on a credit file here in the store to avoid the risk of the gift certificate being lost.

Calendars used to be a very popular gift item, but so many people are now using electronic devices in place of a printed calendar that we substantially reduced our selection of calendars this year. Some titles that we ordered were not produced, and we've already sold out of about half the titles that we did receive. If you want a calendar for 2015, you better hurry.

Signed books are also very popular gift items. Some recently received signed adult books at Uncle Hugo's include Hawk by Steven Brust ($24.99), The Witch With No Name by Kim Harrison ($26.99), and Prince Lestat by Anne Rice ($28.95); recently received signed young adult novels include Ambassador by William Alexander ($16.99), The Witch's Boy by Kelly Barnhill ($16.99), and Clariel by Garth Nix ($18.99); and recently received signed mysteries include The Wolf in Winter by John Connolly ($26.00), The Lewis Man by Peter May ($26.99), The Long Way Home by Louise Penny ($27.99), and Blue Labyrinth by Douglas Preston and Lincoln Child ($27.00). To see the hundreds of signed books we have available, go to our website, click Browse Our New Books, scroll down a bit, and click Signed Books (for either Edgar's or Hugo's or both).

Award News

The Hugo Award for Best Novel went to Ancillary Justice by Ann Leckie ($16.00).

The British Crime Writers Association announced that the CWA Diamond Dagger for an outstanding body of work in crime fiction went to Simon Brett, the CWA Goldsborough Gold Dagger for best crime novel of the year went to This Dark Road to Mercy by Wiley Cash ($14.99), the CWA Ian Fleming Steel Dagger for best thriller of the year went to An Officer and A Spy by Robert Harris ($15.95), the CWA John Creasey Dagger for best novel by a first-time crime writer of the year went to The Axeman's Jazz by Ray Celestin (not currently available in the U.S.), the CWA International Dagger went to The Siege by Arturo Perez-Reverte ($28.00), and the CWA Endeavor Historical Dagger went to The Devil in the Marshalsea by Antonia Hodgson ($15.95).

How's Business by Don Blyly

The oldest independent bookstore in the Twin Cities, The Bookcase in Wayzata, went out of business in mid-October (although one major media outlet reported it as "the last independent bookstore in the Twin Cities" going out of business), after 51 years in business. I've heard rumors of other independent bookstores being in rough shape. The Barnes & Noble on Ford Parkway in St. Paul is also going out of business. And we're not doing very well either.

Last winter was very rough for us (and almost every other business in the area). Things picked up once the weather improved, but they didn't get back this summer to the level of the previous summer, and nowhere near the level of 5 years ago. Now the cold weather is back, and we had a terrible October and expect another rough winter. During the coldest, darkest part of the winter, people want to get home from work and then not go back outside again. So we normally see very few people after 6 pm in January and February. I ran some sales numbers for last January, February, and March and found that for January and February we lost money by being open for both the 6-7 pm period and the 7-8 pm period. By March, sales had picked up enough that we were making money by being open in the evening. We are going to try having Special Winter Hours this winter, for the first time in 40 years. We'll be open our regular hours through the end of 2014. For January and February, we will be closing at 7 pm instead of 8 pm Monday through Friday, and hope that the few people who would have wandered in after 7 pm will instead wander in before 7 pm.

While the entire retail sector of the economy continues to grow, the bookstore sales continue to decline, with the bookstore sector doing significantly worse than the entire retail sector, and I don't expect that to change in the near future. Part of the problem is competition from e-books and part is competition from Amazon and part is heavy discounting on a few bestselling titles by Walmart, Sam's Club, Costco, etc. (which is more of a problem for Uncle Edgar's than Uncle Hugo's since they tend to carry several titles by bestselling thriller and mystery authors and have rarely carried any science fiction or fantasy titles since the last Harry Potter book seven years ago). If enough people do all their book buying at Walmart, etc., pretty soon the only books they will be able to buy are the few that Walmart, etc., choose to carry because all of the bookstores will be out of business. And part of the problem is that the publishers are putting out a lot of books that people are not very interested in reading. Looking over the publishers' catalogs for the winter, Elizabeth and I found a few titles to get excited about and a lot of titles where the decision was "should we pick up 1 copy just in case somebody is interested, or should we just skip it?" Fortunately, most of the publishers have finally figured out that they were putting out a lot more paranormal romances than anybody was willing to read. Unfortunately, they just switched the genre code from "paranormal romance" to "urban fantasy" on a lot of the paranormal romances that they already had under contract. And this then made readers a lot more cautious about picking up anything labeled “urban fantasy,” hurting the sales of the good books as well as the bad books. Publishers still haven’t figured out that they are putting out a lot more zombie books than people want. The huge number of people who go on a “Zombie Pub Crawl” are not primarily major book readers.

Some of you might be asking yourself what you can do to help the Uncles survive. Buying books from us would certainly help, but I realize that this can be influenced by your personal financial situation and how many books the publishers put out that you are interested in reading. But there are several other things you can do to help:

1) Recommend the Uncles to people. Over the years, we’ve tried all kinds of advertising, including newspapers, TV, radio, assorted yellow pages, and various internet-based things, and none of them have been cost-effective. Last March for Uncle Hugo’s 40th anniversary, we spent $1300 sponsoring Minnesota Public Radio for the first day of the sale. We had three new customers come into the store because of the sponsorship, plus several regular customers who thanked us for the sponsorship. Not cost-effective. The single most effective way for us to get new customers has always been personal recommendations from current customers. Positive reviews on various social media sites also help.

2) Give your friends and relatives gift certificates from the Uncles for the holidays, birthdays, anniversaries, etc., or request them for yourself. There are several ways we can handle gift certificates. We can hand the gift certificate to the purchaser (if the purchaser is in the store) for them to deliver to the recipient. We can mail the gift certificate to the recipient. We can hold onto the gift certificate behind the counter for the recipient to come in and pick up in person. Or we can just put a credit balance on file for the recipient and not mess with the actual certificate. (Since the certificate has to be physically present to be used, the credit-on-file option works best when the recipient is not in the metro area and will be using it for mail orders).

3) Printing and mailing the paper newsletter costs us about $5.00 per person per year. The paper newsletter has to fit into the 32-page format, so many titles get left out, many book descriptions get shortened, and most of the book reviews are left out of the paper version. The expanded version, available for free at our website, is usually 55-60 pages long. If you switch from the paper version to the website version, you’ll receive almost twice the information, and you’ll save us $5.00 per year in expense. Just go to the website, click “Mailing List”, and then fill in your e-mail address, click “Newsletter Announcements”, and click subscribe. Then send us an e-mail to let us know that we can stop mailing the paper newsletter to you. If you no longer have any interest in the newsletter, please let us know that we can drop you from the mailing list for the paper newsletter. (And some people who prefer to receive the paper newsletter send us a donation to cover the cost of mailing the newsletter to them.)

I recently got around to reading Bellwether ($7.99), a delightful short novel by Connie Willis from 1996. Sandra Foster is a statistician working in a research facility for a large dysfunctional corporation where Scott Adam’s Dilbert would feel right at home. Her project is to figure out how fads begin and spread, and she hasn’t been having much success. She meets Bennett O’Reilly, a physicist specializing in chaos theory who lost his previous grant and is now stuck working in the same corporate facility. When the paperwork for his next corporate project (involving dispersal of new skills through a group of monkeys) gets lost somewhere in the corporation, Sandra suggests that they save his job by merging his defunded project with her project. She doesn’t have enough money in her budget to buy him any monkeys, but she has a rancher friend who is willing to loan them a bunch of sheep as long as the corporation feeds them. Neither Sandra or Bennett have any experience with sheep, so the idea of trying to teach new tricks to sheep and charting the dispersal of knowledge through the herd of sheep seems like a good idea to both of them. The entire book is a delight, but the sheep portion is particularly humorous.

Naturally, the thought of a corporation trying to find a way to create a fad made me think of publishers sending authors on tours to promote their books, and how much author tours have changed over the last 40 years. Although Uncle Hugo’s was much smaller for the first 10 years, and there were many more bookstores in the metro area back then, we had some wonderful author events back then. Here are three examples:

Douglas Adams was on his first U.S. tour for The Hitchhiker’s Guide to the Galaxy, and the publisher sent him to Minneapolis to parade him through B. Dalton’s headquarters to try to get B. Dalton to push The Hitchhiker’s Guide to the Galaxy through the entire chain. But Douglas Adams was so unknown at the time that nobody else in the metro area was willing to host an event for him, so Uncle Hugo’s got him. We didn’t have a huge number of customers come in to get his signature, but Scott Imes and I had a great time talking with him for an hour in between customers asking for his signature. After that tour, he was in such demand that we never had another chance to see him.

Frank Herbert also didn't draw a huge crowd, but later in the evening he ended up with a few people back at Scott Imes' apartment, a block from the store. Frank asked Scott why he had 3 copies of Dune on his bookshelf. Scott told him that his other 5 copies were currently loaned out to people that Scott thought needed to read it. Frank really like that answer.

Anne McCaffrey drew a crowd that went out the door and half a block down the street. Fortunately, the weather was good. She came back about 10 years later, when we were in our current location, and again the line was out the door and half a block down the street.

A lot fewer authors are sent on tour to Minneapolis these days (and very few authors are willing to come to Minneapolis in the winter). What has changed? While B. Dalton headquarters was in Bloomington, a lot of authors were run through Minneapolis to be introduced to the book buyers. And if the author was already in Minneapolis anyway, they might as well do a signing or two. When B. Dalton was sold to Barnes & Noble and the book buying function was moved to New York City, the number of authors sent to Minneapolis went down quite a bit.

In the early days of Uncle Hugo's, we didn't have the internet or cable TV. Almost all readers looked through a local physical newspaper, and the newspapers carried listings of book events. If the publisher could arrange a signing at a bookstore, and the bookstore sent a notice to the local newspapers, that translated to free advertising for both the book and the bookstore, and many book readers were likely to see the event notice when they looked through the newspaper. Those days are long gone.

In the early days of Uncle Hugo's, people were only able to get the few local TV stations. And the local commercial stations all had at least a couple of hours of locally produced talk shows in the morning, and they were hungry for anything interesting to fill all those hours. Authors on tour were interesting and could almost always get scheduled for at least one and sometimes for a couple of those talk shows while they were in town. Even I was on the channel 11 morning talk show a couple of times in the early years. With so few choices for stations, if a TV was turned on in the morning, it was either on one of those local talk shows or PBS, and the exposure was very broad for the author. Now, the stations seem to find it more profitable and less trouble to run national talk shows for most of the morning (so the publishers want to get the authors on the national talk shows instead of flying the authors all over the country to try to get onto a bunch of local talk shows), and there are many more stations available to watch, so the number of people watching any particular talk show is much lower. There were also a lot more radio talk shows of a non-political nature in those days, so many more authors were able to get local radio time.

Around this time, Gordon R. Dickson told me that the key to making an interview successful (from the author's point of view) was to figure out what you wanted to say, and then answer the questions you wished the interviewer had asked you instead of answering the questions the interviewer actually asked you, until you had delivered the message you wanted to deliver. Of course, some people are better at this than others, and I mainly see this approach used these days by political talking heads on Sunday morning news shows.

Short Recommendations by Don Blyly

Ancillary Justice by Ann Leckie ($16.00) was nominated for all the major awards for science fiction and won the Hugo Award, the Nebula Award, and the Arthur C. Clarke award, among others. The sequel, Ancillary Sword ($16.00) is almost as good. In the first book, Breg looked at the empire on a macro level from both the inside and the outside. In the sequel, Breg looks at one planet that was "civilized" (i.e., conquered by the empire) hundreds of years before, finds that things are not working at all the way things should be working on a "civilized" planet, and sets out to fix things.

A Study in Silks ($7.99), A Study in Darkness ($7.99), and A Study in Ashes ($7.99) by Emma Jane Holloway is a trilogy featuring Evelina Cooper, Sherlock Holmes' niece in an alternate Victorian England. Evelina can work magic, which can get you killed or sent to a concentration camp in this England. The Steam Barons have divided up London and apparently the empire as well, and nobody has the power to challenge them. Sherlock Holmes makes appearances in all three books, and we also occasionally encounter Dr. Watson, Mycroft Holmes (in the second book), and Professor Moriarty (in the third book). But the story mainly involves Evelina, plus some air pirates in dirigibles. There are some romance scenes early in the first book that made me grind my teeth, as some of the very bright young women in the book lost all their intelligence any time a prospective suitor walked into the room, but by later in the first book they became capable of being intelligent even in mixed company. Evelina joins the rebel forces trying to defeat the Steam Barons and return control of the country and empire to Queen Victoria, and the action and the plot kept me reading even through a few slow spots.

There are times when I look at the new release shelf and don't see anything I'm eager to read. It used to be that I'd then pick up an old James White book. Although he didn't win awards, he could be depended on to tell a very good science fiction story, and while most of the novels are set in the same universe, they are independent novels that can be read in any order. But eventually I had read almost all of them, and started having trouble figuring out quickly which ones I had already read. Eric Brown is starting to be my substitute for James White. I've enjoyed everything I've read by him, and so far each has been independent enough to be read on its own. The latest I picked up was Jani and the Greater Game ($7.99). It is set in India in an alternate 1920s. The British have put out a story that they have discovered a deposit of a miraculous new mineral in Nepal that is allowing them to make great technological advances, and they are keeping everybody out of Nepal. The Germans, the Russians, and the Chinese are sending in agents to try to find out what is really going on and to steal whatever secrets they can. Actually, a huge alien ship with two aliens aboard has arrived in Nepal, and the British are busy looting the ship for new technology. Miss Janisha Chatterjee, the daughter of a high Indian official, has been studying in London to become a doctor, but catches a dirigible back to India when she learns of her father's serious illness. She immediately gets caught up in the international espionage, some unpleasant elements of British imperialism, and the Indian independence movement. The story stays interesting and fast paced to the end.

I've been trying to get caught up with some of the series I've been following. The Last President by John Barnes ($7.99) does a fine job of concluding the near-future post-apocalyptic trilogy (set primarily in the U.S.) that began with Directive 51 ($7.99) and Daybreak Zero ($7.99). And Emperor of Thorns by Mark Lawrence ($7.99) does a fine job of concluding the far-future post-apocalyptic trilogy (set primarily in a feudal Europe 1000 years after a world-wide nuclear war) that began with Prince of Thorns ($7.99) and King of Thorns ($7.99).

Possession by Kat Richardson ($7.99) is the eighth volume in her Greywalker urban fantasy series set primarily in the Seattle area, and it's still one of my favorite urban fantasy series. The earlier books are Greywalker ($7.99), Poltergeist ($7.99), Underground ($7.99), Vanished ($7.99), Labyrinth ($7.99), Downpour ($7.99), and Seawitch ($7.99), and they should be read in order.

I also read and enjoyed Red Planet Blues by Robert J. Sawyer ($7.99), a noir private eye novel set on Mars. Lots of desperate people spent everything they could raise to get Mars to try to strike it rich prospecting for Martian fossils, but few succeeded, and the others are desperate for any way to make a dishonest living.

Recommendations by Elizabeth LaVelle

It's easy to see why A Beautiful Blue Death ($15.99) by Charles Finch was an Agatha Award finalist for best first novel. Set in Victorian London, it introduces amateur sleuth Charles Lenox. He's a 40ish, bookish, genial bachelor, with a comfortable income and a brother in the House of Lords. On a beastly cold day, after a trip to Scotland Yard to wrap up a forgery case he was consulted on, he's happy to be back home in his library, with a warm fire, dry socks, and buttered toast, but obligingly steps next door to see his lifelong friend Lady Jane Grey. Prudence Smith, her former housemaid, has been found poisoned: suicide, or perhaps murder. Charles heads to the girl's current place of employment: the home of George Barnard, the director of the Royal Mint. Assisting Charles is his friend Thomas McConnell, a physician and surgeon, who determines that the girl was poisoned with something very rare - definitely NOT the poison in the bottle in her room. There seems to be a suicide note, but Charles learns the girl could neither read nor write, and sets out to track down her killer. While his loyal and clever manservant Graham gathers information about the girl's life from the servants, Charles investigates Barnard's nephews and house guests, and Barnard himself. Finch supplies plenty of suspects, possible motives, and unforeseen complications, and an ending with a couple of good twists. This is a genteel, leisurely, traditional mystery, with an interesting cast of well-developed characters, lots of deduction, and very little violence. I enjoyed Lady Jane's calm intelligence, and Charles Lenox is quietly charming, particularly: his sympathetic and respectful way of dealing with witnesses and suspects, whatever their station in life; his fondness for books - he is reading his favorite new book one chapter at a time, to savor it, but allows himself two chapters after a particularly trying day; his diligent pursuit of answers; and his delight in acquiring a really warm pair of boots that keep his feet dry (a familiar sensation for any Minnesotan!). The series continues with The September Society ($15.99), The Fleet Street Murders ($14.99), A Stranger in Mayfair ($15.99), A Burial at Sea ($14.99), A Death in the Small Hours ($15.99), An Old Betrayal ($15.99), and The Laws of Murder ($25.99).

A Tiger's Tale ($7.99) by Laura Morrigan is a strong follow-up to her debut Woof at the Door ($7.99). Veterinarian turned animal behaviorist Grace Wilde can communicate telepathically with animals (although only a few people know that). She's called to Happy Asses Donkey and Big Cat Rescue to help out when Boris, a usually friendly tiger, suddenly turns ferocious during an exam. As Grace works to calm the cat, she discovers why he's upset: his favorite volunteer, a troubled teen named Brooke, is missing, and Boris saw her taken. The girl's stepfather thinks she has run away again, and refuses to call in the police. So, with some unofficial assistance from her crime scene investigator boyfriend Kai, Grace decides to look for her. I really enjoy the strong, independent women characters in this series. Grace is fierce and capable, and she's beginning to realize that her people skills really need work. Her sister Emma is smart (a successful party planner) and tough (a black belt martial artist), and more than willing to educate Grace about dealing with people. Brooke (once we get to meet her) turns out to be pretty sharp and determined, and rescue proprietor Ozeal Mallory is a great combination of warm-hearted and fierce. Frankly, the criminals don't stand a chance against these women and their animal allies! And Morigan writes great animal scenes - my favorites in this book were Boris the tiger going goofy with a bag of catnip, Grace's wolf-dog hybrid Moss becoming completely obsessed with a new kitten, and Jack-Jack the mini donkey's cunning plan for escaping from his pen. I'm really looking forward to the next book in the series when it arrives in March.

Deirdre "Foxtrot" Lancaster works as administrative assistant (aka chaos wrangler) to wealthy Zelda Zoransky (ZZ for short), keeping things running smoothly at her estate, which includes a mansion, tennis courts, pool, private menagerie, and a cemetery where for decades people have been burying their pets (as well as the occasional circus, show, or rescue animal). As if that wasn't enough work, in A Taste Fur Murder ($7.99), Foxtrot discovers that she's been drafted: the pet cemetery is also a mystical nexus that animal spirits travel through on their way to visit their former human companions, and Foxtrot is the new caretaker. The word is that a human is going to die, the cemetery will be threatened as a result, and she has to stop that from happening. But she will have help. Mr. Tiny (his given name, most unfortunate) is an ectoplasmic shape-shifting dog with a military background, a British accent, and a dry sense of humor. Tango is a cat - in fact, she was Foxtrot's cat until she died ten years ago, but now she's back, reincarnated into the 7th of her 9 lives. Both animals communicate telepathically with Foxtrot, and with each other, and their snarky conversations make this series a lot of fun. Meanwhile, back at Foxtrot's day job, she adds sleuthing to her duties when a servant is murdered while cleaning ZZ's closet, and then ZZ winds up in a coma after drinking drugged tea. With a not-to-bright police detective on the case, it's up to Foxtrot to figure out who is responsible. (Good thing she reads mysteries in her spare time!) Is it one of the staff? One of the house guests? Or maybe ZZ's badly behaved son? Whether gathering clues from animals at the menagerie (with Tango acting as interpreter) or from the ghostly denizens of the cemetery, Foxtrot will need all of her formidable negotiating and problem-solving skills - and her ability to stay calm in a crisis - to crack the case. To Die Fur ($7.99), the second book in the series, brings more challenges when Augustus, a rare albino liger, is poisoned while staying in ZZ's menagerie. Not only does Foxtrot have to figure out who was responsible, but the tiger goddess and the lion god are both trying to claim Augustus' spirit, which could lead to a cataclysmic battle at the cemetery no matter what Augustus decides to do. Despite his demise early in the book, we get to spend a lot of time with Augustus; his spirit is a major character in the book, and Tango mentors him as he considers what he wants to do with his afterlife. I enjoyed the second book even more than the first; the third book is expected in April.

I always enjoy finding a book where the main character shows me the world from a different angle. And that's certainly the case in The Question of the Missing Head ($14.99) by E.J. Copperman (Jeffrey Cohen). Samuel Hoenig is a man with Asperger's Syndrome, which he considers a facet of his personality rather than a disorder, and a very handy one for his chosen profession: he answers questions for people. He knows that people consider him odd; he considers most "typical" people odd, and believes that he behaves quite rationally by comparison. And we get to learn all about his abilities and foibles when he's hired to answer this question: who stole a frozen head from the Garden State Cryonics Institute (GSCI)? A visit to the scene of the crime reveals the dead body of a GSCI doctor. That isn't the question Samuel is there to answer, but his mother and his associate Miss Washburn encourage him to get involved. And Detective Lapides, who is in charge of the police investigation, has never worked a homicide before, and soon turns to Samuel for help. The case rapidly grows more complicated, with ransom demands, kidnappings, and attempted murder, and the plot has plenty of twists and turns to keep things interesting and surprising. Through it all we see events from Samuel's unusual perspective; he spends a lot of time detailing the things he's noticing, as well as his occasional inability to interpret what he's noticing. Miss Washburn has great people skills, acting as an interpreter and facilitator, able to explain Samuel's behavior when it puzzles others, and to provide Samuel with information he's missed or misinterpreted. And the relationship between Samuel and his mother is great, too. Asperger's Syndrome is a trendy plot device these days, but in this case the author knows what he's talking about - Cohen has a son with Asperger's, and has written some nonfiction on the subject. I hope Samuel will be answering many more questions.

Twisted Threads ($7.99, expected early January) by Lea Wait is a promising start to the Mainly Needlepoint series. For the last 10 years, Angie Curtis has been in Arizona, working for a private investigator, but a phone call from her grandmother Charlotte summons her to Maine: when Angie was 9, her mother Jenny disappeared, and now Jenny's body has been found. Back home in Haven Harbor, Angie learns that Charlotte has started a business with some local needlepointers, doing custom work. But Jacques Lattimore, who handles order-taking, delivery, and collections, has stopped sending them payment and answering their calls. Angie tracks him down and brings him back to meet with the group; when Jacques gets sick after the meeting, Angie needs to figure out which of the needlepointers poisoned him. And she really wants to know who killed her mother all those years ago. This book is a bit grittier than the average cozy. Angie is a tough and capable character, but still working through her childhood traumas and the stigma of growing up with an unmarried mother who slept around. And the needlepointers are a nicely varied group: Dave Percy was taught by a crewmate while serving on a Navy submarine; Katie Titicombe learned from her husband Gus, a surgeon who took it up in medical school to improve his stitching, and who also talked Captain Ob Winslow into taking up needlepoint after his back problems made it hard for him to do woodcarving; and Aussie antique store owner Sarah Byrne is also interested in conserving and restoring vintage needlepoint. I enjoyed watching Angie gradually reconnect with her hometown, and adapt to changing circumstances. And I also enjoyed her willingness to work with the police on the investigations - I'm really tired of amateur sleuths who stupidly refuse to work with the cops, and end up in deadly peril as a result.

Newbery Honor Book and Edgar Award finalist Three Times Lucky (ages 10 and up, $7.99) by Sheila Turnage takes us to the tiny town of Tupelo Landing, North Carolina, and introduces us to one of my all-time favorite narrators, rising sixth grader Mo LoBeau. Mo washed ashore in a hurricane, and found a home with Miss Lana (a woman with a love for the dramatic) and the Colonel (a formidable man with a mysterious past and a strong dislike of cops and lawyers); together they run the town's cafe. When cranky neighbor Mr. Jesse is murdered, and it turns out Mo's best friend Dale was spotted near his house, naturally Mo has to get involved. But first the Colonel and then Miss Lana disappear, and the plot gets more complicated as secrets going back years come into play. Mo is intelligent, intrepid, fair-minded, warm-hearted, fiercely loyal, and impulsive; luckily, Dale is more cautious, even downright fearful at times, which acts as a brake on some of Mo's wilder plans. And there are adults around to step in and take charge when things get too tough, or scary, or upsetting. The mystery part of the book is well-plotted, and I loved the town's great cast of characters, and the way the townsfolk look out for one another. But what really makes this book special is Mo's way of putting things. Whether she's asking diner customers how they'd like their peanut butter sandwiches ("Hand-squished, or fluffy?"), or talking about Dale's big brother Lavender ("Lavender is handsome in the NASCAR way, and if I was old enough I'd snatch him up and marry him before sundown."), or defending Anna Celeste (Mo's Enemy for Life) to her demanding mother ("Anna Celeste has the best girl's voice in our class.' It was true-ish. Sort of. We all sing like bullfrogs."), Mo's narration is a delight. Next up in the series is The Ghosts of Tupelo Landing ($16.99). When Miss Lana accidentally buys a haunted inn at the Tupelo Landing town auction, Desperado Detective Agency - aka Mo and Dale - opens a paranormal division to solve the mystery of the ghost's identity; they also plan to interview it for their history assignment (extra credit). As Mo and Dale track down the truth about the ghost (with some help from the new kid in town), they discover the truth about a great many other people, too.

Magic Marks the Spot (ages 8 and up, $6.99) by Caroline Carlson introduces us to The Very Nearly Honorable League of Pirates. Hilary Westfield has always wanted to be a pirate, so she's been studying pirate lore, tying knots, climbing rigging, rowing, and fencing. She can tread water for 37 minutes. She and the family gargoyle love to read Treasure Island. So Hilary is not pleased to end up at Miss Pimm's Finishing School for Delicate Ladies. Uninterested in learning to waltz and faint, or in joining the school water ballet, she and the gargoyle run away to answer an ad for a pirate crew. Years ago, the Enchantress of the Northlands gathered up most of the kingdom's magical items and hid them, because people were using them unwisely, but a few items are still in circulation, mostly in the hands of High Society people, and of course pirates. Now a few High Society scoundrels are trying to round up all that magic for themselves. But pirate captain Jasper Fletcher is determined to find the magic the Enchantress hid, and distribute it to everyone in the kingdom. Hilary and the gargoyle are happy to join his crew. Her former governess Miss Greyson tries to persuade Hilary to return to school, then joins the crew as well, to provide Hilary with proper supervision. But to gain the treasure, they'll have to overcome the most treacherous - and unexpected - villain on the high seas. Hilary is great - smart, determined, capable, protective of her friends, and relentless in her efforts to locate the treasure - and the gargoyle is a great sidekick, plucky but also vulnerable to fears and doubts. And I really like the way that Jasper and Miss Greyson interact with Hilary and Charlie (Jasper's apprentice), listening to them and allowing them a say in events. The book excels at taking preconceived ideas, giving them a good shake, and turning them upside down. It is also very funny, interspersed with articles from the kingdom's newspaper, excerpts from the League's guide to piracy, letters written by various characters, and a couple hilarious examples of the kingdom's Form 118M: Intention to Set Sail. I'm looking forward to reading more of Hilary's adventures.

Mystery Reviews by Gerri Balter

In Killing Kate by Julie Kramer ($7.99) Riley Spartz hasn't seen Laura Warnerm since they had a difference of opinion in college. When Riley hears that Laura's young sister, Kate, has been murdered, she goes out of her way to investigate, and finds out Kate was the victim of a serial killer. Riley also takes on another case, of a dog named Buddy who died of heatstroke because he was left in a car. Riley rescues him, but she's too late to save him. While she works both cases, the serial killer begins to stalk her.
