How's Business? By Don Blyly

We are once again participating in the Hennepin County "Choose to Reuse" program. The coupon book has coupons for several used book stores, three used record stores, a bunch of thrift stores, used clothing stores, used electronics stores, used sports equipment stores, used furniture and office equipment stores, a couple of equipment rental places, etc. The deals vary from store to store, but 20% off for used stuff is most common. The coupons are good August 1 through October 31, 2015. We have a display of the coupon books right inside our front door, but they are also being distributed at Hennepin County libraries and some other official Hennepin County buildings. It's also supposed to be possible to download the coupons with a smart phone, but nobody at the Uncles has a smart enough phone to manage that. The coupons are only good for in-store purchases, not for mail orders.

We see an increase in business every summer. Partly, it's because local customers find it easier to get around than during the winter. Partly, it's because we see a lot of once-a-year customers from out-of-state making their annual trip to vacation in Minnesota or western Wisconsin and they've made a stop at the Uncles part of their annual vacation. (Funny how folks from warmer climates seldom come to Minnesota to vacation in January or February.) Since the Sheraton Hotel was built across the street and especially since the

| Connolly, Harry | A Key, an Egg, an Unfortunate Remark (After years of waging a secret war against the supernatural, Marley Jacobs turned her back on violence, declaring Seattle a safe zone for everyone, living and undead. When her nephew turns up dead in circumstances suspiciously like a vampire feeding, she discovers he had been secretly dabbling in the supernatural. What exactly had he been up to? And does it threaten the peace?). . . . $11.99 |
| Cutter, Nick | The Deep (A strange plague is causing people to forget - small things at first, then larger, until their bodies forget how to function. Deep in the Mariana Trench, a possible cure has been discovered, and a special research lab has been built. When the lab goes incommunicado, a brave few set out, perhaps to unravel the mysteries lurking in the crushing depths - or perhaps to encounter an evil blacker than any could imagine). . . . $9.99 |
| Danielewski, Mark Z. | The Familiar, Vol. 1: One Rainy Day in May (PBO; A 12-year-old girl named Xanther sets out with her father to get a dog, only to end up trying to save a creature as fragile as it is dangerous, which will change not only her life & the lives of those she has yet to encounter, but this world as well - or at least the world we think we know & the future we take for granted). . . $25.00 |
| de Rojas, Augustin | A Legend of the Future (A spaceship is on a mission to Titan, while back on Earth, warring superpowers threaten the fate of humanity. When the ship malfunctions on the return journey, the crew must face their innermost fears, amid experiments in psychological and emotional conditioning and aliens that may or may not be real). . . . $15.99 |
| Druon, Maurice | The Lily and the Lion (Accursed Kings #6: Reissue; Kingmaker Robert of Artois and his aunt Mahaut involve Philippe VI of France in their vicious power struggle. Mahaut dies and Robert is banished to England, where he inspires the new king, Edward III, to start the Hundred Years' War. Meanwhile the sorceress Beatrice, Jeanne the Lame, and the mysterious La Divion come forward to play sinister parts). . . . $14.99 |

convention business has recovered, we've been having a lot of guests at the Sheraton look out their windows, see the Uncles, and come over to look around. Some of the hotel guests just wander around, saying something along the lines of "I've never seen a bookstore like this before" and then leave without buying anything (and often without putting books back where they picked them up). But some of the hotel guests do buy a few books. And some buy a lot of books and have us ship the books back home for them. While our sales are up compared to winter, the sales are about even with the last couple of summers.

We've been having frequent computer problems lately, perhaps partly because the equipment seems to have aged faster than I had realized. The worst was several weeks ago when we had a violent Friday night/Saturday morning thunderstorm that knocked down lots of trees, leaving about 240,000 homes and businesses without power. When I walked into the Uncles Saturday morning a few hours before opening, I found that we had lost power for a few minutes and I had to restart some computers. I pushed the power button on the server, lights lit up, and it went buzz, buzz, buzz, but the monitor wouldn't light up and the other computers couldn't find the server. We couldn't use the cash registers at all or process charge cards in the regular manner. A friend of the store was able to come over mid-afternoon and found the problem. The server's RAM got fried, either when the power went down or when the power went back on. We had a couple of other identical models of computer that we replaced a few years ago with newer computers, so there were plenty of spare parts available, and about 2:30 pm we had the cash registers back in operation. Across the street, the Sheraton didn't get their power back until about 4:00 pm (which meant no food service and no air conditioning on a day around 90 degrees), and the Global Marketplace's annual music festival (with two outdoor stages and one indoor stage) also had no power, no food or beverage service, and no air conditioning until 4:00 pm. I'm hoping to be able to replace the entire computer network at the Uncles in the next couple of months, which will probably mean headaches for a couple of days and then hopefully things will improve a lot.

Duncan, Dave	Irona 700 (Irona is a poor fisherman's daughter. Surprisingly chosen to join the group that governs her city, she discovers a great talent for strategy and tactics, leadership and inspiration. But as she gives her life to the city, an ancient enemy attacks again and again). $16.99
Dunn, Christian (ed)	Space Marines: The Omnibus: Heroes of the Space Marines / Legends of the Space Marines / Victories of the Space Marines (Warhammer 40,000: Omnibus reprint. 3 anthologies, plus 6 additional stories). $17.50
Dunne, Lexie	Supervillains Anonymous (Hostage Girl #2: PBO; New superhero Gail Godwin, aka Hostage Girl, is in big trouble: her nemesis Chelsea is loose, and her trainer Angelica is dead. Everybody thinks Gail killed her, and Davenport Industries has thrown her into a prison full of the supervillains who used to kidnap her. There's a conspiracy that runs to the bedrock of the superhero community. With friends in the crosshairs, it's up to Gail to escape and get to the bottom of things). $6.99
Garrison, Nathan	Veiled Empire (PBO; The Empire is Shrouded, not only by the barrier that covers the land, but by the lies and oppression of the regime. Magic is the privilege of the elite, and the ordinary people have forgotten what it means to hope - but there are some who would resist, with plans put into motion millennia before). $7.99
Great Northern Audio Theatre	In the Embers (A feature-length audio play. On a dig at a Maryland plantation, archaeologist Digger Morgan finds a song, a pressed flower, and the sound of two girls' voices, recovered from a burned wooden beam by using a laser to read the grooves. Who were the girls? When was the fire? The answers lead to 1920s jazz pioneer Kit Jeffers, whose voice mysteriously appears on Digger's computer). $10.00
Hartmann, Ivor W. (ed) Hossain, Saad Z.	AfroSF: Science Fiction by African Writers (Anthology. 22 sf short stories). . $21.99 Escape from Baghdad! (Welcome to Baghdad during the US invasion. Religious fanatics, mercenaries, occultists, and soldiers are all vying for power. Dagr and Kinza, a former economics professor and a streetwise hoodlum, have been promised untold riches if they smuggle Hussein's star torturer out of the city. But getting out of a city in chaos is no easy task, and when they become embroiled in the mystery surrounding an ancient watch that doesn't tell time, nothing will ever be the same). $16.00
Jama-Everett, Ayize	The Liminal War (Taggart #2: PBO; When Taggart's adopted daughter goes missing, he gathers friends, family, and even those who don't quite trust that he has left his violent past behind. Their search leads to an unexpected place - the past - with consequences that are higher than they can afford). $16.00
Joan of Dark	Geek Knits (PBO; Knitting projects for sf, fantasy, and everyday geeks. Includes complete instructions and full-color photos, plus some famous geeks as models). $21.99
Johnson, A/Robinson, K	Metamorphosis (PBO; Limited to 125 numbered copies. Celebrates the WisCon 39 Guests of Honor with two stories from each plus an interview with each). $12.00
Johnson, Brooke	The Brass Giant (Chroniker City #1: PBO; 17-year-old Petra Wade, self-taught clockwork engineer, wants nothing more than to join the Guild, an impossible dream for a shop girl. When Guild recruit Emmerich Goss needs help designing a new clockwork system for a top-secret automaton, it seems Petra has finally found an opportunity. Working together in secret, they build the clockwork giant, but as the deadline nears, Petra discovers a sinister conspiracy within the Guild council - and the automaton is just the beginning). $6.99
Jones, Jeffrey	Idyl - I'm Age (Collects these graphic strips written and illustrated by Jones. Idyl ran in National Lampoon, I'm Age in Heavy Metal). $24.99
Jones, Kelly Lees, Tim	Unusual Chickens for the Exceptional Poultry Farmer (Kids). $16.99 The God Hunter (Field Ops #1: Registry field op Chris Copeland arrives in Hungary to find a sacred spot, lay down a wire grid, and capture a full flask of a god's energy. When his arrogant partner Adam Shailer sabotages the wires, things go very wrong, and the god manifests as a mirror image of Chris. Chris quickly destroys the god and, for the good of the company and his own career, buries the evidence. Six years later, Shailer is a rising star at the Registry, while Chris has taken a break from operations. But now a mysterious serial killer, who bears an eerie resemblance to Chris, is stalking Budapest). $6.99
Lees, Tim	Devil in the Wires (Field Ops #2: PBO; After the perilous retrieval of a long-dormant god from Iraq, troubleshooter Chris Copeland is about ready to quit his job. But his employers at the Registry have plans to build a power facility on the shores of Lake Michigan. Adam Shailer thinks he can cage the god, drain its energy, and power the city. It's Chris's job to make sure nothing goes wrong. But when ecstatic devotees start leaving human sacrifices near the god-house, it becomes clear that the god is not as contained as the Registry would have everyone believe). $6.99
Lovecraft, H. P.	Fungi From Yuggoth: A Sonnet Cycle (2-CD Edition) ('Fungi From Yuggoth', Lovecraft's sequence of 36 sonnets, read by John Arthur with a score composed by Mike Olson. Plus a bonus disc including never-before-recorded pieces such as Farnese's 1932 settings of 'Mirage & The Elder Pharos', the only musical settings of the sonnets approved by Lovecraft, and more). . $19.95
Martin, George R.R. et al	In the House of the Worm (PBO; Full color graphic novel. Collects issues 1-4 of the comic book). $14.99
McCammon, Robert	The Border (Earth has been devastated by a war between two alien races. And the world itself has turned against the handful of survivors, as they succumb to despair and suicide, or are transformed

But the problems with our own computers were just the beginning of the technological headaches. One day we lost our internet connection, but that was because our router died, and was easy to fix. A few weeks later, the internet slowed down so badly that our credit card processing software kept timing out before it could get a response. After 4 hours, Comcast got the problem fixed for the entire area. Four days later, the entire area lost internet service for another 4 hours. (During the second outage of the week, I realize how unfair it was that our fax machine didn't also die when the internet went down: the spammers can still get to us by fax. All winter we get faxes telling us that the human resources department wants us to vacation in Mexico or the Caribbean, using a particular travel agency. During the second internet outage of the week, we received a fax informing us that the h.r. department wants us all to go to a federal training camp to learn to be forklift operators.) We also had problems a couple of times with our website not loading from the server (which I think is now in Virginia, after many years in California). Tech support was not very helpful and kept trying to claim that it was our fault that their server was not working properly. Most recently, the telephone line to Uncle Hugo's went dead. CenturyLink was quick to switch the calls coming into Uncle Hugo's over to the Uncle Edgar's line (so Elizabeth could deal with twice her normal load of robo-calls and boiler room calls), but said it would take a full week before they could send somebody out to look for the problem. (So, Comcast goes down more often than I would like but gets things fixed within 4 hours; CenturyLink goes down and won't send a repairman for a week, and CenturyLink can't figure out why I don't switch my internet service over to them.)

The e-book situation continues to be interesting. Barnes & Noble did have e-book distribution for the Nook set up in 40 countries, but in July they announced that as of August 7 they would only sell e-books to customers in the U.S. and the U.K. I've read that when Sony got out of the e-book market and sold out to Kobo, most of the e-books purchased from Sony became impossible to access and Kobo was unwilling to help. Many people in other countries who bought e-books from

B&N are now wondering if the same thing will happen to them now. Amazon saw the sales of the Kindle tablet decrease by nearly 70% last holiday season compared to the year before. The American Booksellers Association arranged a deal where member stores could sell Kobo e-book readers and e-books, but the sales are reported to be less than spectacular. Of course, if a bookstore has a choice between making $10 by selling a hardcover copy of a title or making $.50 by selling the e-book of the same title, they probably won't push the e-book very hard. And the percentage of the book market claimed by e-books grew only slightly in the last year. What we've seen among Uncles' customers is that a few have switched completely to e-books, a lot of customers have tried e-books and find them useful in some situations (going on vacation or for a book that is no longer available in the print version) but have found that they enjoy reading printed books more than reading e-books, and a lot of customers still haven't tried e-books and are not very interested in trying them.

I just read a report on the book industry in Greece. In late June, the government limited the amount that could be withdrawn from bank accounts and made it extremely difficult to send funds outside of Greece. Since then bookstore sales have dropped between 50% and 80%, sales of books from publishers to bookstores has dropped by 80%, and publishing new books has stopped. Seems that all the paper and ink needs to be imported into Greece, and the printers can't pay their bills to their suppliers because of the currency restrictions, so printing has stopped. The publishers are not allowed to pay royalties to authors outside of Greece because of the currency restrictions, but they couldn't afford to pay anyway because the bookstores can't pay their bills because of the currency restrictions.

One of our upcoming signings is for Saturn Run ($28.00) by John Sandford and Ctein. The publisher has told us that Ctein will be the only one at the signing, but that John Sandford will probably stop by sometime before the event to sign stock.

Son of the Black Sword by Larry Correia ($25.00) is the first of the Saga of the Forgotten Warrior series, and is very different from any other novels that Larry has written. There are no guns and very little humor in the first volume. This is a more traditional fantasy novel, set on a world with a rigid caste system.

There was a war many centuries ago between the humans and the demons, that eventually lead to the demons controlling the seas and the humans controlling the land. Over the centuries, the number of magical weapons has slowly decreased, and without the magical weapons the demons will take the land away from the humans. After its previous bearer died, a powerful ancient sword picked young Ashok to be its new bearer (after killing or maiming the other humans who first tried to claim it). After years of training, Ashok became a Protector, part of an elite military order of roving law enforcers. Ashok became legendary not only for defeating incursions by the demons, but also for having a very rigid black and white attitude towards law enforcement. Political maneuverings among the leading human factions, plus some uncovered secrets from Ashok's past, place Ashok on the wrong side of the law, but his rigid black and white attitudes continue. Larry will be signing at Uncle Hugo's on Tuesday, October 27, 5-6 pm.

A few years ago, when it seemed like half of Uncle Hugo's new release section was paranormal romances, it was hard to find much space opera. That is no longer the case.

Nemesis Games by James S. A. Corey ($27.00) is the fifth volume in The Expanse series. In the first three books in this wonderful series, Leviathan Wakes ($17.00), Caliban's War ($17.00), and Abaddon's Gate ($17.00), the action takes place in the Solar system. In the fourth book, Cibola Burn ($17.00), the humans are using alien technology to expand into the galaxy, and James Holden and the crew of the Rocinante are sent through the alien gateway to try to make peace between a group of independent settlers and a powerful corporate colony ship, which becomes even more difficult when the billion year old artificial planet wakes up and turns violent. In Nemesis

Games, the Rocinante is back in the Solar system for massive repairs. Holden stays with the ship to supervise repairs, and the rest of the crew split up to tie up loose ends from their earlier lives, Amos back to the slums of Earth, Alex back to Mars, and Naomi among a radical political element of the asteroid belt. This allows the book to fill in a lot of back story regarding the main characters, to show in more depth the deep political divisions within the Solar system, and has the crew spread all over the place when all hell breaks loose, so we can view things from four different points of view. I suspect the next book will go back to the galaxy.

The last I read, the SyFy channel series based on The Expanse is supposed to begin broadcasting in December. The first episode was shown at the San Diego ComicCon, and received very favorable reviews.

Empire of Dust by Jacey Bedford ($7.99) is the first published novel by a new British author, and it's a very good old fashioned space opera. Hundred of jump gates have allowed the humans to expand to over 1000 colony worlds, and the megacorps are always looking for more worlds to terraform and sell to new batches of colonists. They are also constantly searching for teenagers with a bit of psi ability, and those they find are "given" hardware in their brains to greatly boost their psi abilities and lots of training to use that hardware, after which they owe decades of work to the megacorps as psi-techs to pay off the megacorps' investment in the hardware and training. The megacorps profit not only from selling new worlds to colonists, but also from renting teams of psi-techs to help the colonies to develop and thrive. Cara is a runaway psi-tech, who has proof of how corrupt and ruthless her former employer is. She teams up (under a false identity) with a psi-tech from a competing megacorp to help establish a new colony on the edge of the frontier, hoping that will keep her former employer from tracking her down. But there are soon problems with the new colonists, with the planet, and with corruption within competing megacorps.

Linesman by S. K. Dunstall ($7.99) is another good space opera by another new author (actually two sisters writing together). Five hundred years before the novel begins, an alien spaceship was found and the technology was replicated to allow humans to get to the stars. There are ten lines that control a spaceship, with three of the lines being vital for getting to the stars. The job of a linesman is to keep the ten lines functioning properly. There are a lot of people who are capable of balancing the lower lines, but only fifty people in the human part of the galaxy who have the skills needed to balance all ten lines. After five hundred years, the humans have colonized hundreds of worlds and split into three major power blocks, each with extensive space military forces. All of the linesmen are members of the Linesmen's Guild, which handles certification and working conditions, and is supposed to insulate linesmen from the political squabbles of the different power blocks.

After five hundred years of not finding any aliens, the humans have found another alien artifact, much more powerful than the earlier alien ship, and everybody wants to control the new artifact. The story is told from the points of view of two very different level ten linesmen. I'm eagerly awaiting the next installment of the story.

It's been almost three years since Michael Cobley's Humanity's Fire series came out, but I just got around to reading it. The books are Seeds of Earth ($9.00), The Orphaned Worlds ($9.00), and The Ascendant Stars ($9.00). This is a very big universe space opera, like those of Peter F. Hamilton or Iain M. Banks, with lots of things going on. In the first book, Earth is under attack by Swarmers, a large insect-like race trying to conquer this part of the galaxy. Earth manages to send off three colony ships using random hyperjumps so that they can't be followed. One of the colony ships reaches a planet (Darien) with a moon that also supports life, and both the planet and the moon are already populated by a short, furry race called the Uvovo, who take in the humans and help them survive. After 150 years of isolation, they are found by Earthsphere. Seems that shortly after the colony ships left, another alien empire (the Sendrukan Hegemony) came along, became allies of Earth, helped to defeat the Swarmers, and have been dominating Earth ever since. Seems there are lots of alien empires out there, and they are often at war, and the Hegemony is happy to use Earth troops in their wars. About the time the Earthsphere ship arrives, the colonists discover the remains of a Forerunner military installation that was critical in a major galactic war 100,000 years ago. Suddenly, the Hegemony and many other empires want to take Darien away from both the humans and the Uvovo and discover the Forerunner secrets.

The three books are fast paced, fairly complex, with lots of interesting characters to remember, and a strange idea about hyperspace I've never seen before. The other two missing colonies also become part of the story. The story arc is completed at the end of the third book, but a new novel set in the same universe will be coming next January.

I am a big fan of Eric Flint's 1632 ($7.99) and most of the many sequels to it. But when Time Spike by Eric Flint and Marilyn Kosmatka ($7.99) came out in 2010, I didn't realize that it tied in with 1632, so I didn't get around to reading it until recently.

Since the events described in 1632 took place, it seems that the U.S. government has been trying to cover up whatever happened, and many scientists have been quietly trying to find out the truth. When another major time displacement event takes place (sending an under-staffed maximum security prison from southern Illinois millions of years into the past, and sweeping up Indians from before the Europeans reached North America, some early Spanish explorers, and some Cherokees and U.S. troops from the Trail of Tears and sending them all to the same time period), we see both what's going on in current times and back in the Cretaceous. This book can be read and enjoyed entirely on its own, but I think a lot of fans of 1632 will be particularly interested in it.

I've read and enjoyed a lot of Robert J. Sawyer's books over the years, but I recently got around to reading his WWW trilogy (WWW: Wake ($7.99), WWW: Watch ($7.99), and WWW: Wonder ($7.99)), and I enjoyed it more than any of his other works. An intelligent being evolves on the worldwide web, and is discovered by Caitlin, a sixteen year old girl in Canada who had been blind since birth until she received an experimental implant to convert the signal from her optic nerve into something that her brain can comprehend. The first experiment doesn't show her what the outside world looks like, but rather shows her the worldwide web as no other human has ever seen it. Once she finds the intelligent being, she sets out to raise it, train it, and protect it from both the U.S. and Chinese governments' efforts to harm it. Sawyer smoothly conveys large amounts of science without slowing down the plot, and the assortment of humans characters is interesting and well developed.

Harper Blaine was a small-time Seattle PI until she was briefly killed on a case. She was resuscitated within two minutes, but ever since then she has been a greywalker, able to step between the world of the living and the world of the dead (and all kinds of supernatural threats). This has led her to take some pretty strange cases. She also met and eventually took as a lover Quinton, a man with very different skills, on the run from his crazed father, a former CIA operative who is now trying to create paranormal tools to carry out his own deranged political plots.

In Revenant, Harper follows Quinton to Portugal (with the help of a vampire/necromancer she has dealt with in Seattle in many earlier books, but who was originally from Portugal hundreds of years ago). An ancient cult has become an ally of Quinton's father, but they have their own diabolical plans, even worse than Quinton's father's plans. If Harper and Quinton don't foil the plans, millions of people will die.
