Parking

Metered parking (25 cents for 20 minutes) is available in front of the store. Meters are enforced 8am-6pm Monday through Saturday (except for federal holidays). Note the number on the pole you park by, and pay at the box located between the dental office driveway and Popeyes driveway. The box accepts quarters, dollar coins, and credit cards, and prints a receipt that shows the expiration time. Meter parking for vehicles with Disability License Plates or a Disability Certificate is free. (Rates and hours shown are subject to change without notice - the meters are run by the city, not by us.)

Free parking is also available in the dental office lot from 5pm-8pm Monday through Thursday, and all day Friday, Saturday, and Sunday.

Award News

The Locus Awards included Best SF Novel to Ancillary Mercy by Ann Leckie ($15.99), Best Fantasy Novel to Uprooted by Naomi Novik ($16.00), Best First Novel to The Grace of Kings by Ken Liu ($9.99), and Best Young Adult Book to The Shepherd's Crown by Terry Pratchett ($18.99 hc, $9.99 trade pb due in September).

The nominees for the World Fantasy Award for Best Novel are The Buried Giant by Kazuo Ishiguro ($16.00), The Fifth Season by N. K. Jemisin ($15.99), Uprooted by Naomi Novik ($16.00), Savages by K. J. Parker, The Chimes by Anna Smail ($26.99), and A Head Full of Ghosts by Paul Tremblay ($14.99).

The 2016 Prometheus Award for Best Novel went to Sevенеves by Neal Stephenson ($35.00 signed hc or $17.99 trade pb).

For decades, the World Science Fiction Convention was the largest science fiction convention, and the Hugo Awards voted on by those with a paid membership to the convention were considered the major awards in the field. But DragonCon now draws about 60,000 people, about 10 times as many as the World Science Fiction Convention. And this year for the first time, DragonCon will be giving the Dragon Awards, and you don't need a paid membership in the convention to nominate or vote on the awards. They have lots of categories (including 4 different categories for sf/fantasy games), but here are the nominees for the book categories:

Best Science Fiction Novel: Somewhither by John C. Wright, Raising Caine by Charles E. Gannon ($17.00, $7.99 pb due October), Ancillary Mercy by Ann Leckie ($15.99), Agent of the Imperium by Marc Miller, Aurora by Kim Stanley Robinson ($9.99), and The Life Engineered by J-F Dubeau ($14.99).

Best Fantasy Novel (Including Paranormal): The Aeronaut's Windlass by Jim Butcher ($9.99), Asteroid Made of Dragons by G. Derek Adams ($15.00), Son of the Black Sword by Larry Correia ($25.00 signed hc, $8.99 pb due in September), The Fifth Season by N. K. Jemisin ($15.99), Changeling's Island by Dave Freer ($10.99), Grave Measures by R. R. Virdi, and Blood Hound by James Osiris Baldwin.

Best Young Adult/ Middle Grade Novel: Updraft by Fran Wilde ($25.99, $15.99 trade pb due in September), Steeplejack by A. J. Hartley ($17.99), Trix and the Faerie Queen by Alethea Kontis, Six of Crows by Leigh Bardugo ($18.99), The Shepherd's Crown by Terry Pratchett ($18.99, $9.99 trade pb due in September), Calamity by Brandon Sanderson ($18.99), Changeling's Island by Dave Freer ($10.99), and Carry On by Rainbow Rowell ($19.99).

Best Military Science Fiction or Fantasy Novel: Allies and Enemies: Fallen by Amy J. Murphy, Hell's Foundations Quiver by David Weber ($27.99, $9.99 pb due in September), The Price of Valor by Django Wexler ($7.99), Wrath of an Angry God by Gibson Michaels, Blood in the Water by Taylor Anderson ($27.00), Chains of Command by Marko Kloos ($14.95), and The End of All Things by John Scalzi ($8.99). (Before the Dragon Award existed, John Scalzi indicated that he did not want to be considered for any awards in 2016, and he has requested that his book be removed from the nominees.)

Best Alternate History Novel: 1635: A Parcel of Rogues by Eric Flint & Andrew Dennis ($26.00), League of Dragons by Naomi Novik ($28.00), Deadlands: Ghostwalkers by Jonathan Maberry ($15.99), Bombs Away by Harry Turtledove ($9.99), Germanica by Robert Conroy ($25.00, $7.99 pb due in September), and 1636: The Cardinal Virtues by Eric Flint & Walter H. Hunt ($7.99).

Best Apocalyptic Novel: A Time to Die by Mark Wandrey, Chasing Freedom by Marina Fontaine, The Desert and the Blade by S. M. Stirling ($27.95, $9.99 pb due in September), Ctrl Alt Revolt! by Nick Cole, Dark Age by Felix O. Hartmann ($15.95), and The Fifth Season by N. K. Jemisin ($15.99).

Best Horror Novel: Disappearance at Devil's Rock by Paul Tremblay, Chapelwood by Cherie Priest ($16.00), Honor at Stake by Declan Finn, An Unattractive Vampire by Jim McDoniel ($13.99), Souldancer by Brian Niemeier, and Alice by Christina Henry ($15.00).

How's Business by Don Blyly

We are once again participating in the Hennepin County "Choose to Reuse" program. The coupon book has coupons for several used book stores, three used record stores, a bunch of thrift stores, used clothing stores, used electronics stores, used sports equipment stores, used furniture and office equipment stores, a couple of equipment rental places, etc. The deals vary from store to store, but 20% off for used stuff is most common. The coupons are good August 1 through October 31, 2016. We have a display of the coupon books right inside our front door, but they are also being distributed at Hennepin County libraries and some other official Hennepin County buildings. It's also supposed to be possible to download the coupons with a smart phone, but nobody at the Uncles has a smart enough phone to manage that. The coupons are only good for in-store purchases, not for mail orders.

As previously announced, on July 1 we increased the minimum price for most used books to $4.00, and it has been much easier to pay our bills since then.

Sales have been good this summer, partly because of the signed books by Lois McMaster Bujold and Sharon Lee & Steve Miler and partly because of all the business from out-of-town customers visiting the store. Looking over the publishers' catalogs through the end of the year, I expect sales will continue to be good through the end of the year.

Sales of printed books continue to increase and sales of e-books continue to go down a little, both in the U.S. and in Europe. Sales of printed books in the U.S. went up in 2015 over the year before for the first time since 2007, and for the first half of 2016 the sales of printed books in bookstore went up 6.1% (measured in dollars, not in units) over the same period in 2015.

In July, 2015, Barnes & Noble hired a new Chief Executive Officer with no bookstore experience. On August 16, 2016 they announced, "The Board of Directors determined that Mr. Boire was not a good fit for the organization and that it was in the best interests of all parties for him to leave the Company." I don't know the details, but I do know that a major factor in Borders going under was that they hired a series of Chief Executive Officers that had no bookstore experience. Each time that they hired somebody who didn't know the business, they would also commission some outside "experts" to tell the new guy what he should do to save the company. The new guy would then implement the stupid, expensive new plan until he got fired. Then a new guy with no bookstore experience would come in, another expensive study would be commissioned from a new group of "experts", and the newest stupid, expensive plan would be implemented until the latest guy got fired. Repeat until the business collapses. So, the company would buy a report that said that people bought more books from wooden bookshelves, and then spend millions of dollars tossing out the old bookshelves and replacing them with new wooden bookshelves. The next time, the company would buy a report that said that people would buy more books from metal bookshelves, and then spend millions of dollars tossing out the "old" wooden bookshelves and replace them with new metal bookshelves. Meanwhile, the people who actually worked in the bookstores knew that people would buy more books if the store offered a better selection of books that the customers were interested in buying. But the selection of books kept going down as money was wasted on implementing plans created by people who didn't understand the book business. Towards the end of Borders' existence, a salesman for one of the major publishers was in the Uncles and said that Borders had just fired the last person in their headquarters who understood how the book industry works, which had led to his company giving up on Borders ever recovering. So far, Barnes & Noble still has a lot of people who understand the book business, but I still hear complaints from customers about how the book selection at Barnes & Noble keeps going down.

Short Recommendations by Don Blyly

Just One Damned Thing After Another by Jodi Taylor ($12.99) is the first of the seven-volume British madcap time-travel series The Chronicles of St. Mary's. All seven volumes are scheduled to be reprinted in the U.S. at a pace of about two to three months apart, and the second volume, A Symphony of Echoes ($12.99), just arrived. Historian Madeleine Maxwell has been recruited to join the faculty at St. Mary's Institute of Historical Research, but it takes a while for her to figure out a few things. Such as the fact that St. Mary's secretly uses time travel to research history. And her fellow faculty members are not merely eccentric—they are unintentional disaster-magnets that go ricocheting through history. And some time machines have been stolen by a group of criminals determined to get rich at whatever cost using the time machines. The first book is a delight, and I'm sure I'll read the entire series.

Joe Zieja will be signing Mechanical Failure ($24.99 hc or $14.99 trade pb) at Uncle Hugo's on August 29, 5-6 pm. The publisher says of the book: "A smooth-talking ex-sergeant, accustomed to an easygoing peacetime military, unexpectedly re-joins the fleet and finds soldiers preparing for the strangest thing--war. The Two Hundred Years (and Counting) Peace is a time of tranquility that hasn't been seen since...well, never. Mankind in the Galactic Age had finally conquered war, so what was left for the military to do but drink and barbecue? That's the kind of military that Sergeant R. Wilson Rogers lived in before he left the fleet to become a smuggler. But it turns out that smuggling is hard. Like getting-arrested-for- dealing-with-pirates-and-forced-back- into-service kind of hard. It doesn't seem so bad--the military was a perpetual tiki party anyway but when Rogers returns after only a year away, something has changed. These are soldiers, "actual" soldiers, doing actual soldier things like preparing for a war that Rogers is sure doesn't exist. Rogers vows to put a stop to all this nonsense even if it means doing actual work." That's all true, but they also compare him to Douglas Adams and John Scalzi. A much better comparison would be to Harry Harrison, both for Bill the Galactic Hero series and the Stainless Steel Rat series. Mechanical Failure is the first of a series.

About 5 years ago the Samuil Petrovitch trilogy came out by Simon Morden: Equations of Life ($8.00), Theories of Flight ($7.99), and Degrees of Freedom ($7.99). The trilogy is set in London in the relatively near future, when terrorists have set off nuclear devices all over the world.

London has become the home for many refugees, including organized crime organizations from Eastern Europe and Japan. And it has become the home for Samuil Peterovitch. Petrovitch is not his real name. He is a smart-mouthed brilliant young man who used to work for a Russian crime lord, but he found an opportunity to steal a huge sum of money from the crime lord, set up some false identities and backgrounds, and under the Petrovitch name managed to get accepted to a physics Ph.D. program in London. He'd be happy to just do his physics research, but the world keeps intruding, and when that happens, Petrovitch strikes back. Petrovitch rather violently saves London several times during the trilogy, and becomes a cyborg as he keeps needing to replace various parts of his body. He also forms a bond with an artificial intelligence and learns to hate Reconstruction America (described as "ultra-conservative, hyper-patriotic, quasi-fascistic, crypto-theocratic" in the fourth book). The fourth book, The Curve of the Earth ($15.99), takes place about 10 years after the end of the trilogy. Late in the trilogy, Dr. Petrovitch adopted an orphaned girl named Lucy. Lucy also studied physics, and was doing research on Alaska's north shore when she mysteriously disappeared. The American government is not searching for her, but offers Dr. Petrovitch the opportunity to come in person to search for her. It's obviously a trap, but he's determined to find her, and he's still brilliant, devious, and prone to violence to achieve his goals. The American government pairs him up with a genetically-altered, vat-grown, not very bright FBI agent, and the race is on to find Lucy. I didn't enjoy the fourth book quite as much as the trilogy, but still recommend it for people who have already read the trilogy.

Tom Holt is primarily known for his humorous sf and fantasy books, and I've been occasionally enjoying his books for decades. I read his latest, The Good, the Bad, and the Smug ($15.00), and the mix of goblins, smug elves, and an investment banker trying to do good was somewhat amusing, but didn't really grab me. So I then picked up one of his older books that I hadn't read yet. In Blonde Bombshell ($13.99), part of the government on an alien planet decides that the radio programs from Earth are so disruptive to the alien culture that they must be part of an Earth plot to invade the planet. They respond by sending a smart bomb to destroy Earth. The smart bomb includes an artificial intelligence that will be destroyed when it explodes, which means the artificial intelligence really wants to make sure it's doing the right thing before it blows up. When the first bomb fails to destroy Earth, a second smart bomb is sent, which also believes in obeying the First Law of Sentient Ordnance: Thou shalt not blow up the wrong planet. And the second bomb is convinced that Earth must have a very sophisticated hidden defense system, or else the first bomb would have destroyed it. It replicates a human body, transfers much of its intelligence into the body, and is soon trying (with limited success) to pass as a human and discover the secret defense system. There are also some not-so-bright aliens running around trying to pass as humans. Fun is poked at just about everything, both on Earth and on the alien planet. This book is a real hoot.

Mothership ($7.99) by Martin Leicht and Isla Neal is the first of a trilogy that came out in mass market paperback, packaged as an adult sf novel although the trilogy was originally published in hardcover as young adult fiction. In 2074, 16-year-old Elvie is pregnant and attending the Hanover School for Expecting Teen Mothers aboard an Earth-orbiting spaceship. (Why put pregnant teenagers into orbit to have their babies? This is just the first of many, many examples of bad science in the trilogy.) The spaceship is attacked by a group of space commandos, that happen to be part of a secret alien force invading Earth, and Elvie is soon leading the way to try to rescue her fellow teens—even the cheerleaders. (Much of the book involves hostility between not-so-bright cheerleaders and odd geeky girls who are not cheerleaders.) She eventually learns that there are actually 3 mutually-hostile groups of aliens trying to secretly invade Earth, and she eventually manages to get most of the teens back to Earth safely. I don't usually read young adult fiction, I'm usually bothered by bad science, and I really didn't enjoy the cheerleaders vs. geeky girls aspect of the book. But Elvie's growing maturity and self-confidence, and her interactions with her geeky father, her best friend Ducky, and the father of her kid (who seems incapable of gaining maturity) were interesting enough to keep me reading. In A Stranger Thing (#2, $7.99) and The World Forgot (#3, $7.99) Elvie learns more about the three invasion forces, we encounter lots more bad science, and the plot takes many interesting turns. I enjoyed the humor in the second and third books more than the cheerleader vs. geeky girls humor of the first book. While the trilogy was far from the best novels that I read in the last 3 months, I did actually enjoy it.

Nexus by Ramez Naam ($7.99) is the first book of a near-future series. Nexus is an experimental nano-drug that can cause humans to link together mind-to-mind, run apps in their brains, and increase their intelligence. Governments try to suppress it for the general public while trying to exploit it for national defense and international espionage. Some naive, idealistic young neuroscientists get caught up in the U.S. government's suppression and exploitation machinery, and soon discover that other scientists are also caught up in other governments' suppression and exploitation plans. About 10% of the book is thought-provoking discussions of the possible advancements in neuroscience and what it will mean to the un-augmented humans to have a segment of the population very augmented; the other 90% is fast-paced, action-filled technothriller. I'll be reading Crux (#2, $7.99) and Apex (#3, $14.99) as soon as I get a chance.

I was surprised by how much I enjoyed The Ocean at the End of the Lane by Neil Gaiman ($7.99). When it came out in hardcover, I heard lots of good comments, but the way it was promoted by the publisher didn't make it appeal to me. When it came out in paperback, I continued to hear lots of good comments and finally gave it a try. A middle-aged man returns to the small British village where he grew up and is drawn to the small farm at the end of the lane near where his family's house used to be. He starts to remember strange things, both mundane and supernatural, that happened to him when he was seven years old, and how Lettie Hempstock, a remarkable girl who lived with her mother and grandmother at the end of the lane, helped him to cope with those strange things. The use of language is beautiful. Seeing things from the perspective of a seven-year-old boy worked better for me than I would have expected. The strange events are sometimes awe-inspiring, sometimes frightening, and often question the human view of reality. The lack of understanding between the boy (who just wants to be left alone to read books) and his parents contrasts with the level of communication between the boy and the three women (who are far from human) that live at the farm at the end of the lane. In fact, the three women seem far more human in their interactions with him than any of the adults he has to deal with, while also being far from human in their abilities, experiences, and outlook on reality. And one of the dangers they save him from is truly frightening.
